Summary: What if Juliet had been pregnant with Romeo's child and delivered it before her suicide? An AU of what would happen if that were the event. There will be some old-English-speak that I don't fully understand but I'll try my best. I don't own anything except the child! All rights reserved! OC x OC!

Child of the Fallen

Prologue

"Milady Julietâ€¦ I'm afraid you don't have a choiceâ€¦"

The blackette teen girl covered her mouth and shook her head as her tears ran down her face. She did not care that her current expression and feeling was making her gorgeous, pure face of beauty look quite unseemly; she had just lost her one and only true love, Romeo. Though he was but a Montague and she a Capulet, their love was more powerful than any either of their houses had seen. "Nay, tell me this can be changed! Please, Lady Nurse! I beg of youâ€¦" she sobbed, grabbing the older woman by her shoulders. The Nurse bit her lower lip and lowered her eyes in pure shame. "I'm afraid not, Juliet. Thou must go through with the marriage to Parisâ€¦" she spoke in a voice so full of sorrow and pity. "Nay, I shall not allow itâ€¦" Juliet whispered, placing a hand to her stomach. "Neither shall sheâ€¦" The last part caught the Lady Nurse's attention as she had not heard it so clearly. "Eh? Canst thou speak up?" she asked, tilting her head. Juliet brought her head up and her dark eyes seemed devoid of light and happiness. Not a single inch of either could be found in the young girl's beautiful eyes and soul. "I am with child," were her exact words.
